

THE FAILURE OUR 5 CHECKS MISSED

A WEEK OF WORK THAT SILENTLY NEVER EXISTED

THE SETUP

AUG 26: WE POSTED OUR 5 CHECKS

A human approval gate, read-backs from the publisher, a watchdog emailing twice a day, metrics written to every row, a rollback on standby.

The checklist for anything you'd trust to run alone. We run on it.

THE FAILURE

AUG 30: ONE JOB DIED QUIETLY

The Sunday job that drafts the week's posts hit a usage cap upstream and exited. Nothing retried it.

No drafts existed, so nothing downstream had anything to check.

THE TWIST

THE WATCHDOG WORKED ALL WEEK

Twice a day, on time, it emailed about three overdue posts it could see.

It cannot ask about rows that were never created. Nothing can watch what doesn't exist.

THE BLIND SPOT

MONITORING INSPECTS WHAT EXISTS

A job that errors leaves a trail. A job that never starts leaves nothing.

To every check we built, "no news" and "all clear" look identical.

THE FIX

ONE CHECK STANDING OUTSIDE THE SYSTEM

A heartbeat: by 9am Sunday the week's drafts exist, or a human hears about it. One dumb question, asked from outside the thing being watched.

Alert on absence, not just errors.

CHECK YOURS

3 QUESTIONS FOR ANY UNATTENDED JOB

What happens when it errors? What happens when it never starts? Who finds out, and how fast?

Most systems only answer the first one.

WHAT RUNS ALONE IN YOUR BUSINESS?

On the call we map which of your workflows deserve a watchdog and which need a heartbeat outside them. Sometimes the answer is neither, and we say so.
